“To truly address the myriad challenges to global health equity, we must engage a broad movement of people working together across generations, borders, and disciplines. Global Health Corps is building this movement through global service and solidarity, and I am proud to be a part of it.”

Our mission is to mobilize a global community of emerging leaders to build the movement for health equity. We are building a network of young changemakers who share a common belief: health is a human right.
As we reflect on milestones and memories from this year, I’m reminded of a question I’m often asked about Global Health Corps: seven years in and nearly 750 young leaders strong, “What is the most unexpected outcome of this journey?”

In sum: the tremendous strength and impact of our ever-growing network. We predicted impact and we see it. What we didn’t predict was the depth and breadth of the bonds of our community, which serve to amplify our fellows’ individual and collective impact. We hoped, but couldn’t have imagined, that over the years, 90% of our alumni would remain in global health or social justice. Our alums are leading thinkers and doers in Ebola recovery, they’re pioneering researchers and prolific writers, implementing global health advocacy strategies, they’re even running partner organizations where they were once fellows.

In 2009, our first business plan was a piece of flip chart paper, a makeshift pitch deck on which we scrawled in marker the core tenets of our model that still hold. Health is a human right. To realize it, we harness and build the potential of a diverse pool of bright young talent placed in partnership across organizational and cultural divides.

Our team has spent the last year implementing our new three-year strategic plan, plotting global growth and ambitious plans. We’re grateful for wise and innovative thought partners like McKinsey & Co., SY Partners, and researchers at The Wharton School. Through an unprecedented partnership with Sanford Health, we have expanded our impact, tapping into areas of mutual expertise across the US, West and East Africa, and calling on the GHC community to move forward our symbiotic goals. To carry out our overarching mission, GHC has tripled in staff worldwide, exponentially grown our budget, and are on track to realize a tipping point to a world with dynamic, diverse, empathetic, and highly networked emerging leaders at the helm.

Today, our current class of 140 fellows is addressing systems gaps – from drug stockouts, to patients falling through the cracks, to scattered health records – within 66 organizations across our regional hubs. In the meantime, they are speaking up against injustices, writing powerful narratives, and organizing their own movements.

Thank you for the role you have played in our success and our impact ahead!

With gratitude,
Barbara and the Global Health Corps team
Our Vision

Global Health Corps (GHC) believes that every person has the right to live a healthy, dignified life. We also believe that everyone has a role to play in the health equity movement. We embrace a philosophy of active problem solving and partnership that is designed to bring about real and sustainable progress. We are committed to creating a new breed of health sector leaders who develop innovative solutions to the most challenging health problems all over the world.

Our Approach

- Identify high impact health organizations with gaps that need filling
- Competitively select exceptional young leaders with diverse skills
- Pair them up with a co-fellow from another country, alongside whom they will live and work
- Match them to an organization for a year of service
- Train them to become empathetic, effective, and collaborative young leaders
- Build a global ecosystem of fellows and alumni impacting health equity
"[Our fellow’s] impact hits all levels of the organization in Burundi, Democratic Republic of Congo, Uganda, and the US. She helped build a monitoring and evaluation framework that will give us a foundation for years to come."

—Uganda fellow supervisor
In 2009, 22 passionate and resilient “early adopters” joined our first fellowship class to work within eight partner organizations in Africa and the US.

By tracing their trajectories, we better understand the potential we have to shape the future of global health.

“It changed my view of how I see systems work and gave me a trait of always trying to learn. Learning from others while also becoming a leader.”

Jafari Bulembo

“It learned to be more resilient, how to persevere, and how to reach out to the people around me. Prior to GHC, I didn’t even know what global health was. Now I am right in the midst of it all.”

Ameet Salvi

“Through GHC, I realized that we all can have an impact and reach our goals if we seize each and every occasion with passion and humility. GHC played a crucial role in my career.”

Soline Mugeni

“I am currently working in a job that was my dream job when I applied to GHC seven years ago. I thought it would take me 10-15 years to get here, and now here I am. GHC community is the reason I am here.”

Real change takes sustained effort and long-term investment. We deliver impact through talented young leaders and the power of a deeply committed and highly networked leadership community.

Our movement grows in scale and strength each year because our alumni are:

STAYING IN THE FIELD
90% work in global health or social justice.

IN POSITIONS OF INFLUENCE
83% in mid-level or senior leadership roles.

AFRICA RISING
85% of African alumni continue to work on the African continent.

HIGHLY CONNECTED
33% got their current job through the GHC community.

724 emerging leaders and growing...
INSPIRING CHANGE

How can 724 young leaders inspire change at a massive scale? Our community is gracing stages, pages, and podiums, bringing fresh leadership perspectives.

In the last year alone, they’ve amplified their voices worldwide:

- 47 outlets in which our fellows and alums have been published
- 23 cities in which our community has delivered keynotes or sat on panels
RWANDA

"The land of a thousand hills" has demonstrated inspiring progress on health, economic development, and gender equity in the last decades. GHC fellows and alumni are working within the Ministry of Health and a wide range of NGOs countrywide addressing issues from nutrition to girls’ empowerment. Our robust alumni network is leading conversations on how to build equitable health systems. Earlier this year, they coordinated a high-level health financing forum featuring the Ministry of Health.

2015–2016 CO-FELLOW SPOTLIGHT: HEALTH BUILDERS
Francine Irakoze, Operations Fellow | Lara Heskestad, Communications Fellow

Over the past year, Francine and Lara worked together to deliver impact by:
› Revamping employee onboarding as the organization grew.
› Building financial management systems to maximize resources.
› Managing clinical training for 40 healthcare professionals.
› Documenting Health Builder’s work at six health centers.

Post-fellowship, both have remained at Health Builders rising into new roles. Francine coordinates clinical trainings as an Oxygen Program Specialist while Lara is growing the organizations’ profile as Communications and Development Specialist.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT: JEAN CLAUDE MUHIRE
2013-2014 fellow, Health Poverty Action

Claude served as a fellow in 2013-2014, directing community mobilization efforts for WASH and Girls Education Programs within Health Poverty Action. He went on to pursue a Master’s in International Community Development at Hebrew University in Jerusalem and has since returned to Rwanda. Claude remains an active advocate for women’s and girls’ rights. He works currently as an Engagement Manager with GiveDirectly, providing household grants to help eradicate extreme poverty in rural East African communities, and most recently is Chairperson of the GHC Rwanda Alumni Committee.
UGANDA

35 placement organizations to date  160 young leaders trained

“The pearl of Africa” is developing rapidly, with a majority of the population under the age of 35. Our fellows and alumni are working with the Ministry of Health and a range of NGOs on challenges like conservation health, safe motherhood, and HIV/AIDS prevention. Our highly engaged alumni network is driving the country’s health equity movement. In the past year, they founded an advocacy group focused on empowering communities, trained girls to create reusable sanitary pads, and lead a campaign to increase access to care for cancer patients.

2015–2016 CO-FELLOW SPOTLIGHT: SAVE THE MOTHERS

Taylor Hendricks, Fundraising and Development Officer | Mary Ajwang, Program Coordinator

Together, Mary and Taylor worked to deliver impact by:

› Developing the first five-year strategic plan and budget for the Mother Baby Friendly Hospital Initiative that benefits nearly 40,000 Ugandan mothers.
› Raising $42,000 to fund programming.
› Launching toll-free community hotlines in several hospitals.

Post-fellowship, Mary has co-founded — with other GHC fellows — and now leads an advocacy group focused on sexual and reproductive health and rights. Taylor was recently trained as a birthing doula in the Luwero District.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT: REHEMA AANYU

2012-2013 fellow, ACODEV

Rehema was a 2012-2013 fellow at Action for Community Development (ACODEV), where she launched the organization’s communications and partnership strategy. She went on to earn her Master’s in Peace and Conflict Studies at the University of Basel and currently serves as the Liaison and Networking Officer for the Uganda Water and Sanitation NGO Network (UWASNET), working to improve lives through the realization of the rights to safe water and improved standards of sanitation.
Landlocked in southern Africa, the country spans a mineral rich and highly diverse landscape and is poised for significant health progress. Our fellows and alumni work in partnership with the Ministry of Health and NGOs to run malaria prevention campaigns, expand reproductive health services, and everything in between. Our small but expanding network of Zambian alumni are increasingly stepping into positions of influence to lead the country’s health equity movement.

2015–2016 CO-FELLOW SPOTLIGHT: CLINTON HEALTH ACCESS INITIATIVE (CHAI)
Effie-Ann Forson, Nutrition Associate | Humphrey Mulemba, Resource Mobilization Associate

Humphrey and Effie leveraged their complementary skills to deliver impact by:

› Leading a nation-wide feasibility study on fortified infant food to reduce stunting.
› Conducting a landscape assessment for manufacturing and distributing infant food.
› Estimating retail market and integration of infant food with existing nutrition programs.

The pair impressed senior leadership with their proposal for fortified infant food, which was fast-tracked and is now nearing production phase. Effie has since returned to the US to work on nutrition while Humphrey is overseeing a minerals start-up focused on driving local economy in Zambia.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT: KOCHELANI SAILI
2014–2015 fellow, PATH

Koch joined GHC as a fellow in 2014–2015, his first foray into public health as an entomologist who had previously studied and tracked aquatic insects. Koch joined PATH as a Malaria Control Program Officer where he conducted entomological surveillance to support successful malaria elimination strategies across Zambia. He has since taken on a new role at PATH, Entomological Surveillance Officer, where he continues to leverage his unique expertise to deepen his impact in addressing mosquito-borne illnesses.
A legacy of strong leadership on maternal health and the potential for huge impact in some of the country’s least developed areas make “the warm heart of Africa” a critical place to invest in building health systems. Fellows and alumni work within the Ministry of Health and NGOs on issues such as sustainable agriculture and behavior change communication. Our small but mighty alumni community is rising fast, poised to shape Malawi’s future. This year, our inaugural Southern Africa Leadership Summit convened nearly 50 alumni from the region.

2015–2016 CO-FELLOW SPOTLIGHT: PARTNERS IN HEALTH (PIH)

Nandi Bwanali, Public Relations and Program Documentation Coordinator | Rina Asemamaw, Socioeconomic Determinants Coordinator

Rina and Nandi worked to deliver impact in Neno, one of the most remote regions in the country, by:

› Leading outreach for primary health care screening of nearly 500 community members.

› Assessing community members’ needs to inform effective programming.

› Developing compelling field-based and multimedia content of PIH’s work.

Post-fellowship, Nandi is helping to lead communications for the One Community Project, building a strong community response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic. Rina is working with the Ethiopian Government as an Overseas Development Institute fellow.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT: FATSANI BANDA

2012-2013 fellow, Partners In Health

Fatsani left her job at a bank to become a GHC fellow in 2012-2013, serving as Procurement and Logistics Coordinator at PIH where she worked to procure and distribute essential drugs and medical equipment for Neno district hospital and twelve surrounding health facilities. After the fellowship year, she was promoted to Operations Manager where she oversaw procurement, transport and logistics and supervised subsequent GHC fellows. Fatsani recently joined PIH Liberia’s team as a site Operations Manager, overseeing logistics while helping to strengthen Liberia’s health systems post-Ebola crisis.
As a 2013-2014 HIPS fellow in Washington, DC, Stephen coordinated mobile outreach and direct service initiatives for people living with HIV and Hepatitis C. After his fellowship, he led National HIV Testing Week efforts and advised jurisdictions with high HIV prevalence rates as a Program Coordinator for Urban Coalition for HIV Prevention Services. Stephen is currently the Health Equity and Capacity Building Manager at the National Coalition of STD Directors, where he oversees initiatives to target populations and provides technical assistance on health equity, cultural humility, and PrEP.

Although it is one of the wealthiest nations in the world, health inequity persists across the US in urban and rural areas alike. Recent policy changes have expanded access to affordable care to millions, but there is still a long way to go. GHC places American and non-American fellows to work with community-based providers, City Departments of Health, and NGOs throughout the Northeast on issues ranging from safe needle exchange programs to support for LGBTQ youth experiencing homelessness. Our US-based alumni span coast to coast—a highly-engaged network who are leading crucial conversations, research, and policy work on health equity.

2015–2016 CO-FELLOW SPOTLIGHT: COVENANT HOUSE
Molly MacInnes, Health Fellow | Gift Nwanne, Health Fellow

Gift and Molly worked to deliver impact by:

- Reducing Covenant House’s pharmaceutical expenses by 80% by securing health coverage for uninsured youth.
- Coordinating 440 medical visits for more than 200 young people.
- Raising $6,000 and building out Covenant House’s donor portfolio.

Post-fellowship, Molly has started medical school in Chicago. Gift returned to Nigeria as a Research Officer at the Institute of Human Virology.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT: STEPHEN HICKS
2013-2014 fellow, HIPS

As a 2013-2014 HIPS fellow in Washington, DC, Stephen coordinated mobile outreach and direct service initiatives for people living with HIV and Hepatitis C. After his fellowship, he led National HIV Testing Week efforts and advised jurisdictions with high HIV prevalence rates as a Program Coordinator for Urban Coalition for HIV Prevention Services. Stephen is currently the Health Equity and Capacity Building Manager at the National Coalition of STD Directors, where he oversees initiatives to target populations and provides technical assistance on health equity, cultural humility, and PrEP.
Our current 2016-2017 class started their fellowship in August 2016. Our 140 new fellows hail from 19 countries and are currently working with 66 partner organizations in the US and East and Southern Africa.
